

IITM Hackathon Answers

IITM Hackathon Answers

Can the stones/rocks/boulders obtained during excavation be used for construction if found technically

Question
Reference Clause
Clause Extraction
Summary

Can the stones/rocks/boulders obtained during excavation be used for construction if found technically satisfactory?
14
"The Contractor shall not sell or otherwise dispose of or remove ... the stone, rock or other substances or materials which may be obtained from any excavation made for the purpose of the works..."
The document does not contain enough information to answer this question. There is no explicit clause that allows or prohibits the use of excavated stones/rocks/boulders for construction if found technically satisfactory. Clause 14 only restricts the Contractor from selling or disposing of excavated materials, but it does not mention reusing them for construction.